

March*

Happy march everyone! Oh, my goodness can't you all feel the spring air? I don't know about you guys, but it puts a good spring in my step knowing that the cold is finally over, and warmer weather is coming. That being said I am hoping to get more people wanting to now come and get a book to read outside!

The free books are still here in the library for kids to come and grab, I did get some new titles in so that there is more of a variety to see what everyone is interested in. The Imagination Library is still up as well for those 5 and under that we can sign up.

Now I know that spring work is coming up and for all those that are stuck in the tractor I just want to know if you guys listen to books on tape? I do have some here in the library that you are more than welcome to come and grab to keep you company while you are plugging along, or if you have the fancy Bluetooth let's get you all signed up for Libby and you can check out audiobooks through there. All you would need is your library card number.

For our summer reading program there is the Lego Guy coming the 10th of July at 10 in the morning! He comes in and explains the history of Legos and what is all new, then he lets the kids build whatever they want with the Legos he has. This is going to be so fun, and I am super excited to have him come!

And now for the question that is always asked. What have I been reading? WELL I have been diving back into my fantasy era again and I have just finished the first two books of the Hunger Game series by Suzanne Collins. Now I have only seen the movies never really picked up the books, but they were calling to me and I finally answered the call. We are looking at the hunger games through Katniss Everdeen's eyes through the whole series. Now the Hunger Games is just an awful game that the capital puts on to keep the 12 districts in their place. There is a ceremony called the Reaping, and it is where all the district kids names between the ages 12-18 get put into a big bowl and get chosen, one boy and one girl. Well Katniss little sister, Prim, is at her first Reaping and her name gets picked. Katniss being the protective older sister she volunteers in Prim's place! The boy that gets picked is name Peeta Mellark and Katniss at first isn't so sure about it but as you follow their training and how they are with their mentor Haymitch, who is just a drunk, and they don't understand how he could ever be their mentor. As you see that Katniss and Peeta are willing to fight and stay alive they come up with a plan to have people support them in the games. They fake that they are in love and how sad it was for them to both get picked to be in the games, which totally works in the first book, but it comes at a price! In books there is always more to them that makes more sense than what the movies do in my opinion. I would totally recommend this to someone who just loves fantasy and a little bit of a romance. This is a Young Adult series, and I have all 3 as well as the prequel!

Thank you guys for all the support!
